

I live in los angeles and use the XM traffic channel. I use it often and find it very helpful in navigating the LA road system during rush hour. Why would the FCC yank such a helpful tool off the air, when LA need's everything possible to help such a congested, dydfunctional freeway system run in a more efficient way.